THE INAUGURATION CEREMONIES AT WASHINGTON TODAY.

A FIVE HOUR PROGRAM

Ending With The New President's Inaugural Address Is Carried Out With Precision And Solemnity.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Washington, March 4.—Woodrow Wilson was today inaugurated as President of the United States, with Thomas R. Marshall as Vice-President, amid scenes of stirring animation and with impressive ceremonies, marked by the main by simplicity, and yet retaining that degree of dignity, with some of the pomp and spectacular display which inevitably attaches to the induction of a new chief executive of the nation.

The elaborate ceremonies of the day followed a fixed program covering practically five hours. It began in the morning with the drive of the President, President-elect and Vice-President-elect from the White House to the Capitol, where until noon Mr. Taft was occupied with the measures passed in the closing hours of the 62d Congress.

Day's Chief Ceremony.

The inauguration of Vice-President Marshall was fixed to occur shortly after noon, along with the assembling of the new Senate and the swearing in of new Senators. Following this, toward 1 p. m., the chief ceremony of the day, the inauguration of President Wilson, occurred at the east front of the Capitol. Then came the return of the Presidential party to the White House and the review of the inaugural parade, lasting well along in the afternoon.

Mr. Wilson and Mr. Marshall had remained with their families at their hotel through the night. As the hour approached for opening today's ceremonies, they were joined by the inaugural committee of Congress, made up of Senators Crane, Bacon and Overman, and Representatives Rucker, Garret and McKinley. To this committee was assigned the first function of importance in the day's proceedings, that of conducting the President and Vice-President to the White House for formal greetings with President Taft, followed by the drive of the Presidential party to the Capitol. Mrs. Wilson and family, and Mrs. Marshall remained at the hotel to be escorted to the Capitol later by a military aide.

Escort Assembles.

Meantime the escort for the Presidential party was assembling in the parkways adjoining the White House. Foremost in this escort was the Essex Troop from Mr. Wilson's own state. With them, from Mr. Marshall's state rode the Black Horse Troop of Indiana. One thousand Princeton men with touches of their college colors, vied with the mounted escort in number and activity.

Mr. Taft and Mr. Wilson occupied carriages with members of the inaugural committee; Mr. Marshall and Senator Gallinger, President pro tem of the Senate, following immediately in another carriage with other members of the committee; carriages following with members of Mr. Taft's retiring cabinet.

Pennsylvania avenue and the main thoroughfares converging at the Capitol were packed from an early hour of the day to witness this move of the Presidential party to the Capitol.

While Parade Gives Touch of Color.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Washington, March 4.—President Wilson's desire for Jeffersonian simplicity is distinctly reflected in the decorations of the national capitol for his inauguration today. While the city is abuzz with green and white—the color scheme adopted for the whole affair—and there are occasional blazes of red, white and blue from entwined flags, roses and streamers with here and there a touch of Princeton's orange and black, yet the whole effect is one of simple dignity.

The central point of this decorative scheme is the court of honor, that wide expanse of Pennsylvania avenue immediately fronting and extending the entire length of the White House grounds. Usually, great columns and arches of classical design, with shields and banners and the insignia of a Roman triumph, have marked this precinct of chief activity. But today simplicity is the dominant note, with nature taking the place of art, and great forest cedars replacing the classic columns and Venetian masts for past inaugurations. Before this wide area usually stand out the monuments and trees of Lafayette Square, but today these were shut out by great tiers of seats, rising to the tops and sweeping along the whole front of the park.

Avoid Elaborate Display.

In choosing the decorating scheme for this central point the court of honor, as well as for the broad plaza fronting the Union station, the embellishment of public and private buildings and the decorations generally along the thoroughfares, the inaugural committee was guided by President Wilson's desire to avoid elaborate display.

It was with this idea in view that the principal feature of the president's reviewing stand was designed as a replica of the portico of Monticello, the home of Thomas Jefferson, regarded as a type of that simplicity which the early president exemplified. This replica of Monticello is directly in front of the White House, forming the left front of the broad court of honor. While preserving some of the severe design of the original structure, the replica suggests some of the stately old mansions of the south, the row of colonial pillars, along the front resembling the porticos of Mount Vernon and Arlington, as well as those of Monticello. The Monticello replica forms the main part of the reviewing stand, and in this was erected the glass enclosure, where, free from the possibility of inclement weather, the president could review the marching thousands of the inaugural parade.

Flags Are Absent.

The decorations of the portico were in keeping with no color other than white along its entire front and without the usual display of flags, sunbursts and other elaborate designs. Its only dash of vivid color was in a small draped president's flag, barely discernible above the chair occupied by the president. The white of the reviewing stands was relieved only by a few garlands of laurel and evergreen, while further back the court of honor was enclosed by high walls of fresh green trees brought from the Virginia hills.

The court of honor extended from the treasury building at Fifteenth street and Pennsylvania avenue, to the state, war and navy building at Seventeenth and Pennsylvania avenue, 1,000 feet. This stretch was practically encased with tall and graceful cedar trees about thirty feet high, making a complete circle of the enclosure and forming the background.

SIDE LIGHTS ON THE
GREAT INAUGURATION
DOWN IN WASHINGTONHow Notables in Public Eye Acted
Before and During the Various Ceremonies.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Washington, March 4.—Inauguration Day dawned cold and gray. A solid bank of heavy clouds completely shut off the sun and threatened to carry out the official prediction of unsettled weather in the afternoon or at night. With temperature between 45 and 50 degrees a light south wind fanned the city, but no such discomfiting blizzard of four years ago were expected as attended the inauguration threatened, though every preparation had been for them. It looked, however, as if a drizzle might begin almost any time.

Crowd at Hotel. Daylight found things moving swiftly toward the climax of the day's program, the inauguration ceremonies at the east front of the capitol. Streets were roped off, but traffic through them was permitted early in the day. About the Shoreham Hotel where Mr. Wilson was stopping a small crowd kept at a distance by police, waited and waited for a glimpse at the new president as he started on his way. Another crowd, admirers of Mr. Taft, waited at the White House grounds for a glimpse of him. The grounds, however, had been closed to the public and the crowd waited at a distance.

All over the city there was an air of expectancy and final preparation. "Finishing touches" were being put on every thing. Humane speaking the city became a shell when almost its entire population and probably 200,000 visitors began early massing in the down town sections along the line of march and near the capitol grounds.

Wilson Rises Early. Just after eight o'clock a pair of shoes which had reposed all night outside of Mr. Wilson's door disappeared and this indicated to members of his personal party that he has arisen for the day. It is his custom to leave his shoes outside at night to be polished. The incoming president prepared to breakfast in his room with Mrs. Wilson and their three daughters.

Mrs. Wilson and the daughters, however, did not arise to join the incoming president at breakfast so he ate alone in his room and within a little more than half an hour after he had arisen was dressed and ready for the day's events. First he glanced at some of the morning papers and then looked at the mail. Just as Mr. Wilson finished his breakfast the sun broke through the clouds and but a moment later it again was swallowed up.

Conference With Bryan. Shortly after nine o'clock William J. Bryan called with William S. McCombs to see Mr. Wilson and the three went into conference.

When Mr. Bryan came out of Mr. Wilson's room he held in his hand one of the ten invitations which have been issued to the new cabinet members providing places for them in the senate chamber today.

"Good morning, Mr. Secretary," cried a chorus of voices as the distinctive envelope was seen.

"Good morning, gentlemen," returned Mr. Bryan with a broad smile and then he went to call upon Mr. Marshall who has a suite in the same hotel.

Taft Gets Little Sleep. President Taft had worked in his study until nearly three o'clock this morning and had left no instructions about being awakened.

President Taft after a few hours' sleep was discovered by White House attendants at work in his study before breakfast. He joined Mrs. Taft and Miss Helen just before nine o'clock in the private dining room of the White House.

CLIMAX OF CEREMONY

Brief Review of Grand Parade Which

of Otherwise Simple and Dignified Exercises.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Washington, March 4.—The army of inauguration, 30,000 strong, swinging with measured tread to the blare of a brigade of bands, marched in review today from the capitol to the White House, a magnificent tribute of welcome to the administration of Woodrow Wilson.

Historic Pennsylvania avenue, the path of other armies of peace and war, was like a valley between hills in a glory of color—with the simplicity of nature's green and white dominating the color scheme along the line of march, while the dazzle of uniforms, the flash of guns, sabers, gold lace and brass buttons, and the mingled roar of bands, bugles, lumbering artillery and tramping thousands, to the brilliant scene. High on either side of the avenue, its buildings undulating and rolled along with the steady sweep of a giant river.

Climax of Ceremony. The street pageant was the climax of the inauguration ceremonies at the capitol, adding the outward spectacular features to the formal exercises which had just taken place at the senate chamber and the east front of the capitol. Since early in the morning the ranks of the marchers had been lying in restive division waiting for the word to advance.

With the first word of swearing in the new president, the commands rang out and were echoed along the line. There was a rattle of arms, a clatter of hoofs, and the great parade was in motion behind the carriages of President Wilson and Vice-President Marshall.

And then with the steady "Traump, tramp, tramp" of marching feet, the stream of color wound down from the capitol hill and breasted its way toward the White House to which the Presidential party had driven briskly ahead to take places for the review.

Officers and Divisions. The chief officers and divisions of the parade were as follows:

Grand Marshal—Major General Leonard Wood.

First Division, regular army, navy and marine corps—Major General W. W. Wotherspoon, commanding.

Second Division, state militia—Brigadier General Albert L. Mills, commanding.

Third Division, veteran and patriotic organizations—General James E. Stuart of Chicago, commanding.

Fourth Division, civic organizations—Robert N. Harper, commanding.

As the procession took up the march, the noted Essex troop of New Jersey swung in behind the carriage in which President Wilson and former President Taft rode. Then came Vice-President Marshall's carriage and behind that the Black Horse Troop of Culver Military Academy, brandishing and bowing to the lively music.

Manila, P. I., March 4.—The town of Jolepelo has undergone incessant attack by the Moros for the past two weeks. Details of the operations are as a rigid censorship is in force. Even letters sent by officers and men defending the town are subjected to scrutiny.

That the fighting has been serious, however, is obvious from the arrival here today of 32 wounded Americans. The Moros it is reported continually flung taunts at the defenders of the town, calling on them to "come out and fight in American fashion and not like pigs."

The troops are chafing greatly at their inaction and many complaints are heard among both officers and men.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Washington, March 4.—Charges that the police of Washington did not properly protect yesterday's suffragist parade were made in the House early today by Rep. Hobson of Alabama, who later declared that he proposed asking for an investigation of the police department during the extra session of congress. Mr. Hobson told the House that the congressional section of the parade led by Rep. Rucker of Colorado, comprised a score of senators and representatives, who, starting at arms' length and four abreast finally were crowded into single file by the crowding of spectators, and that the police "scooped with the ruffians."

"I have been called over the telephone," said Mr. Hobson, "and told by a lady that her daughter was on one of the floats in the parade and that a ruffian climbed on the float and insulted the daughter."

"Her daughter ought to have been at home," interjected Rep. Mann of Illinois, the republican leader. The remark aroused a number of members. "She had as much right there as anyone," said Rep. Rucker of California. "The gentleman ought to be ashamed of himself."

TAFT'S LAST ACTS AS PRESIDENT NOW OVER
DOCKET IS CLEANEDSigns Bills Passed by Congress—New Cabinet Position Is Arranged
For By One Measure.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Washington, March 4.—President Taft today signed the bill creating a department of labor with a cabinet portfolio. President Wilson's nomination for this position will be William B. Wilson, now a retiring representative in congress from Pennsylvania.

Among the first bills President Taft signed were the rivers and harbors, public buildings, agriculture and general deficiency.

Vice President Marshall accompanied by the congressional committee was ushered into the senate chamber at 11:45 and given a seat in the front row.

Mrs. Marshall from her place in one of the galleries accompanied by Miss Caroline Holland, of Indianapolis, waved to her husband as he came on the senate floor, but after a stay of a moment Mr. Marshall and the committee returned to the vice president's room while Senator Fall continued his filibuster on the Indiana bill.

All eyes were on the ten chairs on the senate floor which were allotted to President Wilson's cabinet. Josephus Daniels and William G. McAdoo were the first to take seats there. William Jennings Bryan and Franklin K. Lane took a chair in the "cabinet row." Representative Redfield entered the chamber a moment later and took his place with the other cabinet appointees.

The President vetoed the sundry civil appropriation bill carrying 113-99,000 because of its provision which prohibited the department of justice from using its anti-trust appropriation in prosecution of labor unions and farmer's organizations.

The house at once repassed the sundry civil appropriation bill over President Taft's veto by a vote of 270 to 50. The senate then held a conference report ready and took another recess until 10:30. The senate met and took up the conference report on the Indian bill.

The house after repassing the sundry civil appropriation bill over President Taft's veto adjourned sine die at 12:04. Just before the house adjourned Speaker Cannon to the chair and an affecting scene of farewell took place. Speaker Clark told the house that he violated no confidence in saying: "I could have been sworn in as president of the United States if I had wanted to, but I preferred to stay with you."

Speaker Clark and Mr. Cannon received an ovation upon the adjournment of the house.

Pres. Taft's veto of the sundry civil bill had characterized it as "class legislation of the most vicious sort." The senate finally agreed to the conference report on the general deficiency bill, thus disposing of that measure.

The house later also agreed to the conference report on the general deficiency bill, leaving the Indian bill the only measure not finally disposed of.

The Indian appropriation bill then remained the only measure to be disposed of, but Senator Fall declined to allow the senate to accept the conference report.

Speaker Clark appointed a committee consisting of Underwood of Alabama, Stockman of Florida, and McCall of Massachusetts to notify the president that the house was ready to adjourn.

An attempt to re-pass the sundry civil bill over President Taft's veto was abandoned in the senate after it had been accomplished in the house.

The formal program of adjourning the senate sine die at 12:35, and the organization of the new senate over Vice President Marshall began to deliver his inaugural address.

President Taft and Mr. Wilson were greeted with loud cheering as they came out the main door.

When all the guests were assembled Vice-president Marshall stepped up to the desk and at 12:34 took the oath.

Mexico City, March 4.—A general movement to recognize General Huerta's administration is being manifested by the rebels in all parts of the republic.

Many of the rebels, however, display sensitiveness in regard to the amnesty bill to be discussed by the chamber tomorrow, which they say wrongly implies their defeat.

Rumors of plots and conspiracies are frequent in the capital where everybody continues to suspect his neighbor.

A force of rebels occupied Tecapixtla, a town of considerable importance in the state of Morelos. The war department today announced its intention of dispatching an expedition into the southern rebel zone. New significance has been added to the northern insurrectionary movement under Gov. Carranza of the state of Coahuila by the discovery of some adherents of Huerta far to the west in Zacatecas, where they have burned railroad bridges.

Carranza himself is preparing to evacuate Saltillo and a government force is expected to replace him late today.

General Benjamin Argumedo, one of the rebel commanders, today placed his 900 men at the disposal of the new administration. His headquarters are at Lerdo, a suburb of Torreon.

Argumedo telegraphed also that one of his lieutenants on Sunday attacked and defeated the rebel chief Juarez in northern Aguas Calientes.

Major Cardenas, who was in charge of the escort of Francisco Madero and Jose Pino Suarez on the day they were killed, was today promoted from the rural guard to the same rank in the regular army.

The departure of the members of the Madero family from Havana, for the United States, has checked the Mexican government's plan to ask the Cuban government to surrender them as alleged conspirators. It is not believed the United States government will be asked to grant their extradition.

Madison, Wis., March 4.—In order to be sure that autoists will not be tempted to speed faster than the law allows when out foraging, Assemblyman Allen D. Richards of Iowa county is urging a bill providing that no automobile or motorcycle, shall be sold in the state whose maximum speed is greater than twenty-five miles an hour. The bill is not applicable to the automobiles that have already been sold in the state with a higher speed. Neither are its provisions applicable to an automobile "owned and operated by any non-resident of the state or by any physician and surgeon or police officer of the state."

Two bills for a one day rest in seven have been introduced in the assembly. The Holmes bill applies to street car employees, and the employees of the state and municipalities. Assemblyman Kiefer has introduced a measure broader in scope than the Holmes measure. It applies to practically every trade. Under his bill before any employer can operate on Sunday he must post notices and file a list of employees with the industrial commission of the state. The Kiefer bill does not apply to janitors, watchmen and employees whose duties include no work on Sundays, other than setting sponges in bakeries, caring for live animals and maintaining fires.

Added proof of the good feeling existing between the American and National Leagues is furnished by the recent action of the Red Sox in granting the Boston Braves the use of Fenway Park on April 19 and May 30, when the Braves will play their holiday games there. The New York Highlanders are slated to make use of the Polo Grounds, haunts of the Giants, when the National League team is not in town. Chief Sylvester of the Washington police declared today that the inability of his force to manage yesterday's spectators was not due to any wilful neglect of duty by any of the men. "What is needed is a larger force here," he said.

Before Woodrow Wilson has been president many hours he will have placed in his hands by the incensed suffragists a copy of the vigorous resolution of denunciation they adopted at their mass meeting last night following their parade along Pennsylvania avenue. The resolution reads: "Resolved: That this meeting unqualifiedly censures and denounces the shameful conduct of the police during the suffrage pageant just ended which denied to the marchers for suffrage their rights to parade freely and unmolested in the main streets of the capital, and subjected to frequent ribald insults from the crowds which all but overwhelmed them."

"To these insults the police in many cases listened without effort to repress as they were but mildly interested when the marchers were compelled to go in single file. Such mismanagement would have been a disgrace in any city, but it is doubly and trebly a disgrace in the national capital, which belongs to all our citizens, men and women alike."

A similar resolution for the investigation of the Washington police force because of the near riot during the suffrage parade yesterday was offered in the senate and referred to a committee.

KLAUS AND PAPKE READY FOR PARIS BOXING BOUT

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

Paris, March 4.—Frank Klaus and Billy Papke, the rival American fighters who are generally recognized as foremost among the world's middle-weight boxers, are to meet in this city tomorrow night for a twenty-five round contest. Both men are reported in the pink of condition. Klaus has a fight attracted so much attention among the followers of the sport in Paris and throughout France. The management of the club under whose auspices the fight will take place expects a record-breaking crowd. The extraordinary amount of interest may be attributed in large part to the fact that the two Americans already have beaten George Carpentier and Marcel Moreau, who are considered the best of the French fighters.

The barometer is still somewhat above normal in the Appalachian mountain region and on the South Atlantic coast, but the weather is cloudy and warmer there on account of an area of low barometer in the Ohio valley. This latter disturbance is the center that was over Iowa yesterday. It has little strength, but has been attended by light snowfall in and around the Lake Region.

The barometer is high in the Northwest, and in the Plateau region, with attendant clear skies and cold weather. It is especially cold in Northern Wisconsin and Minnesota, and upper Michigan. Temperatures of ten to eighteen below were recorded around Lake Superior this morning.

An area of low barometer appears over the Canadian Northwest and northern Rocky Mountain region. It is attended by cloudiness, light snows and rising temperature on the northern plains.

HERE I am again at the same game selling "LION FENCING," one of the best and only fencing when durability is considered.

One of the few that stands up under the pressure of snow drifts and ice, with its stiff and solid stays, does not double over when stock rubs on it as so many others do.

When buying fence look for the kind that will stand use and abuse as most all fences have to be subjected to, and also easy to put up on uneven ground.

My motto is "Square Dealing," and whether I carry it out or not ask any of my numerous customers of the past ten years.

TAFT'S FAREWELL.

Today in Washington the people cheer for Wilson, the President, as they did in the palace grounds of Versailles when Louis the Sixteenth died. "Le Roi est mort! Vive le Roi!" and the unfortunate Louis the Seventeenth, who ascended the throne of the Capets. With Wilson's inauguration, with the ascendancy of the democratic party to power and the retirement of the republican administration, the recall of William H. Taft to private life, a great change has swept across the political map of the United States.

William H. Taft retires to private life one of the nation's chiefs that has tasted the sweets of victory and the bitter gall of defeat. He has sounded the depths of human meanness and tested the heights of man's nobility. He has played his part manfully in the world's affairs and while suffering the pangs of defeat in a great cause still rears the brighter side of life, never looking on the reverse of the shield, a true philosopher.

His brief talk to the National Press club recently tells his story in far more explicit language than can otherwise be written. He has been in public service since he was twenty-one years old—he is now fifty-five—and yet he smiles and in the moment of defeat turns into a personal victory by remarking:

"Now, gentlemen, after that record, and still in good health, do you suppose that I regret anything? That I have an occasion for kicking or squealing? What kind of a man would I be if I did, with the measure all on my side? Now I am looking to see if I can't repay the country and fortune for the good things given me and if I can't work in the cause of good government."

Taft retires to public life, Wilson enters the presidential struggle. Wilson is untied as a national administrator while Taft's record is an open book.

In the long run, however, the integrity of the president who in the face of the most remarkable opposition in the history of the presidency has gone steadily forward, doing his duty calmly, quietly and firmly, will make itself felt. Some day the people will class Taft among the three or four biggest men of the nation. So with the mob at Washington, struggling and fighting for preferment we join in the cry, "The king is dead! Long live the king!"

PLAY ON WORDS.

Prof. E. F. Ward of the state university objects to the common usage of the word play in general conversation. In Baraboo recently Prof. Ward saw fit to take decided exception and voiced sentiments which perhaps are right, but still take away from the English language a word much used, though perhaps often abused. His sentiments on the subject are interesting and the reader is left to judge for himself what he has accomplished. "We use the word 'play' to describe the worst, most degrading and brutalizing of all our activities on the one hand, and we use the same word to describe the best and noblest activities on the other," declared Prof. Ward.

"We describe the hectic gambling that leads to insanity and suicide as 'play,' and we describe the production of beautiful music as 'play'."

"The two kinds of 'play' are alike in that they are both free from activities; but one is the freedom of destruction, of dissipation, of conflict, while the other is the freedom of harmony and co-operation."

"The essence of such so-called 'play' as gambling or pugilism is the expression of the brutal desire to win at the expense of another. The essence of the other sort of play, is the idea of harmonious co-operation. This is the principle back of every beautiful work of art; the principle expressed in music, drama and architecture. It is the principle of utility as expressed in every invention and development of labor-saving machinery. It is the principle of utility as expressed in every invention and development of labor-saving machinery. It is the principle of life and health in both the individual and the whole community, and only on this principle shall progress be made."

"Health in the individual is harmonious co-ordination and unified progressive functioning to a common end. Disease, in the individual, is disorganization and strife. The same is true of the community as a whole."

"The one great embodiment of the principle of co-operation in America is the public school. It is the one important beginning of progress toward that co-ordination which is not for the advantage of the few, but for the whole future and for the common good."

"The school house everywhere, both in the city and in the country, must be made the headquarters for organized citizenship if democracy is to be maintained, and there must be engaged in every community, with his office in the school house, a civic secretary, to be at the service of the people."

"The suffragettes had their parade in Washington, Monday, but it was not a marker to the parade some of these same ladies would have made had there been a few mice or rats scattered along the route."

One hundred years ago today, James Madison took the oath of office at Washington—March 4th, 1813. He proved a wise leader in a troublesome period in the history of this nation.

The new nickels are in circulation, millions of them, and despite the hue and cry of the slot machine owners, they would not fit, there are millions of slot machines ready for them to be put in.

The renunciation of Huerta's name may not be of any consequence a few days from now. Nevertheless, it is "Wentra!" Make the first syllable rhyme with "bear," not with "dead."

Mrs. Pankhurst likens the "women's revolution" in England to the Mexican revolution. Perhaps she intends to challenge Lloyd George and order dead walls and firing squads for two.

For Jeffersonian simplicity today's show in Washington evidently set a new mark for elegance. Did not the "High Hat" brigades of Chicago march in all their glory?

No need to look for annul even if Huerta does seem to be getting the Mexicans under control. Cipriano Castro has gone as far south as Cuba.

And neither in Mexico does there seem any opportunity for Andrew Carnegie to pension enough ex-presidents to make it worth while.

Some ambitious gardeners have already planted their tomato seeds in boxes in the house so as to be ready for spring when it arrives.

New York, it is reported, has loaned Mexico $10,000,000. Perhaps the intention is eventually to annex it as a Tammany ward.

Though the new nickels are much admired they are not as popular by a twenty to one ratio as the old-fashioned dollar.

President-elect Wilson is wise in having all his dental work done now. He won't have much time for it after today.

Abdul Hamid, in a published article, opposes divorce. Considering the number of wives he has, who can blame him?

Under the vigorous administration of General Huerta, Mexico is becoming as peaceful as a cemetery.

The first suffragist party platform will undoubtedly contain a plank declaring for good roads.

For a number of days past, Adrian Armageddon.

As a beginning, Mr. Wilson has succeeded in decreasing the high cost of inaugurating.

According to the Pujo committee there is and there is not a money trust.

J. Hamilton Lewis is not yet the senator from Illinois but he is near it.

What a long time it has been between democratic inaugural parades?

Heart to Heart Talks

By JAMES A. EDGERTON

TEMPERAMENT AND TWADDLE.

No, no, I cannot talk painting. No one does who is a real painter. It is discussed in omnibuses, in cafes, in drawing rooms, but not here.—Jillaine Germaine Degas, Greatest Living French Painter.

There is no harm perhaps in talking "art" if one knows anything about it. There may even be no positive harm in talking it if he knows little or nothing. In time he may learn. Yet is there anything under the sun more "stale, flat and unprofitable" than the chatter about art by near artists and people with a smattering of the subject?

Yes; there is one thing worse—so called "artistic temperament."

What is art? Is it not art to do one's work well in whatever field he occupies? If he knows his subject, loves his work and makes a finished product, is not that art? What need is there to develop indiosyncrasies and "temperament" in conscientious, inspired and worth while work?

If we confine art to the narrower definition of painting, sculpture, music, drama, poetry and the like, where is there greater need for all the twaddle about "temperament?"

The big winner in these fields, as in any other, is the man who learns all about his subject, is a master of detail, sinks himself in his art and works, works, WORKS. That word "work" is really the key word of the whole proposition. Success cannot be won without it. It is not "temperament" that is needed half so much as ordinary, old fashioned industry.

The greatest artists, whether in painting, music, the drama or elsewhere, work as hard and as honestly as winners in any other field, and in most cases they have no more "temperament" than a successful lawyer, teacher or business man.

Indeed, most of the temperament twaddle comes from smatterers and half baked people, who know next to nothing of what they are talking.

The thing misnamed "artistic temperament" seems to have little place other than as a veil for affections, roses, vanities, bad temper and other forms of piffle and self indulgence.

Art is a high term, and it is indubitably hopeful that there is an artistic awakening in America, but there is no more relation between "artistic temperament" and the real thing than there is between a quack and a scientist or between a faker and an aviator.

ON THE SPUR OF THE MOMENT

His Future.
When we observe the baby's brow.
As only dippy parents can.
We know that he is going to be
A scientist when he's a man.

But when we hear the baby sing.
In dead of night and reach high C.
We know beyond the slightest doubt,
He'll be a pugilistic champ.

Then when we note his pudgy fist,
We first catch that little snamp
Is going to grow up with a punch
And be a pugilistic champ.

But when we look upon his face.
And note expressions lurking there,
We know for sure he's going to be
An actor quite beyond compare.

But still you cannot always tell
A kid's career by just his looks.
He may turn out an auctioneer,
Or he, alas may peddle books.

According to Uncle Abner.
I ain't got much use fer a woman that chaws tobacco, but I have got just as much use fer her as fer a man that uses a curling iron.

It is getting so that lace curtains in the front windows are little dogs out in the front yard and so much of a sign of aristocracy as they used to be.

Some feller is goin' to make a fortune some day by inventing a way to press a man's pants while he has 'em

No woman ever had a photograph taken that looked natural, for they never pose for the photographer with their hands on to their back hair.

Len Higgins has run his automobile everything else he has encountered.

The difference between a genius the length of his hair.

Pop Geers.

They say Pop Geers won't drive again.

What do you know concerning that?

We've seen that old guy pull the lines

Since we were just a knee-high brat.

It won't seem like the same old track
Or like the same old racing ground,
Without the well-known humped-up form.

Of Old Pop Geers a-sailin' round.

Pop Geers was drivin' horses when Columbus sailed the salty sea,
And found the great America.

And saved it up for you and me.

It seems as though there never was a time when this old world did not look forward to the racin' week.
And Pop Geers in the biggest trot.

It seems as though Pop Geers has stood.

For centuries just like the Sphinx.
A mystery never to be solved.
By racing bookies, touts and ginks.

An old man on the square is he.
His name will ring down through the years.
And every man who loves clear sport
Will raise his hat to old Pop Geers.

SIDE LIGHTS ON THE GREAT INAUGURATION DOWN IN WASHINGTON

at the capitol were scheduled to begin the entire east front was packed with humanity. Scenes about the Shermans Hotel and the White House became more active as the morning wore on. The Princeton students and University of Virginia students who were to form the line between which Mr. Wilson was to pass on his way to the White House began arriving.

The noted Essex troop Mr. Wilson's escort, and the Culver troop, Mr. Marshall's escort appeared.

Taft Gives Welcome.

The ride to the White House was finished between cheering lines of the students. The party whirled up the drive to find President Taft waiting to welcome the incoming president to welcome the incoming president on the front porch. The Princeton band played and the student body sang "Old Nassau." The official party quickly passed into the White House to await the beginning of the drive to the capitol.

President Taft having in mind the incoming president's desire for simplicity escorted him to the East room of the White House instead of the Blue Room which is the formal reception place of dignitaries. Here Mr. Taft and Mr. Wilson chatted for a brief time.

At 10:17 the ride to the capitol began. In the first carriage were President Taft and Mr. Wilson. With them were Senators Crane and Bacon. Crowd is Orderly.

At the President-elect's request the number of secret service men assigned to guard the carriage in the procession to the capitol was reduced to two.

The party proceeded slowly down Pennsylvania avenue until it neared the capitol and the four black horses drawing the presidential carriage broke into a trot. The crowd along the route was demonstrative, but respectful and orderly.

President Taft and Mr. Wilson were escorted to the president's room where Mr. Taft at once took up the work of signing bills. Mr. Marshall went to the vice-president's room accompanied by members of the committee and was met by Senator Gallinger, president pro tem of the senate. The two parties remained in these rooms until congress was ready for the inauguration of the vice president in the senate chamber.

To President's Room.
When President Taft and Mr. Wilson approached the president's room Mr. Taft turned to the president-elect and said, "Well, Mr. President here's your room."

The two men passed inside and as they did so Mr. Taft spied Mr. Bryan outside the corridor and invited him to enter.

"I don't know whether I can come in there or not," said Mr. Bryan, "I'm not president you know."

"Well I'm still president," returned Mr. Taft, "and I invite you in." Mr. Bryan entered.

Mrs. Wilson and her daughters meanwhile entered the spaces reserved for them in the senate gallery. Mrs. Wilson wore a tan colored dress with a brown ribbed silk coat and a small hat to match. Miss Margaret Wilson wore blue silk poplin, Miss Jessie Wilson lavender broadcloth and Miss Eleanor Wilson bright blue.

Mrs. Taft and her daughter went to the home of Miss Mabel Boardman to await the coming of Mr. Taft after the inauguration ceremonies, when they will depart for Augusta, Georgia.

President-elect Wilson sat at the right of President Taft on the inaugural stand while Vice-president Marshall took his seat at the left of President Taft at the edge of the platform and talked with Senator Bacon.

A burst of applause and cheers greeted Champ Clark as he passed on to the inaugural stand at the head of the line of house members. Speaker Clark leaned toward President-elect Wilson and the two shook hands, bringing more applause from the crowds.

President Wilson took the oath of office at 1:35 p. m.

President Taft, who had sat with a good natured smile on his face, as the crowd surged about, burst into a hearty laugh when someone yelled, "Where is Teddy?"

It was 1:34 o'clock when Chief Justice White stepped forward. The party arose and President-elect Wilson raised his hand to take the oath of office. Cheers which greeted the rising fell to a hush as the chief justice repeated the oath to the president.

Mrs. Wilson, seated on a lower level, climbed upon a chair at the edge of the platform and placed up of her husband as he repeated the oath after the chief justice at 1:35 o'clock. In a moment her daughter, Margaret, pulled another chair forward and joined her.

A moment later, as President Wilson began his inaugural address, Mrs. Marshall joined them and peered over the rails.

CLINTON RESIDENTS MOURN THE DEATH OF MRS. COOPER

Highly Respected Woman Passes Away Monday After Extended Illness—Funeral Held Today.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Clinton, March 4.—Clinton people were pained to learn that Mrs. Hiram Cooper had passed away at 4:30 o'clock Monday morning. Although Mrs. Cooper had been sick for some time her death was nevertheless a shock to her many friends.

Frances A. Smith, the oldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. P. W. Smith, was born July 19, 1848, on the farm now occupied by Clayton E. Stoner, one and a half miles east of town, where she grew to womanhood. She was married to Hiram Cooper, April 3, 1883, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Shepard, her folks having moved shortly before to Hays, Kansas. One child was born to them, which died in infancy. Mrs. Cooper has for many years been a consistent and faithful member of the Congregational church.

She leaves to mourn her passing three brothers—D. H. Smith of Grand Lake, Colo.; C. D. Smith of Ladd, California; and C. S. Smith of Hays, Kansas; and two sisters: Mrs. Gertrude Adams of Hays, Kansas, now in Los Angeles, California, and Miss Emma N. Smith of Hays, Kansas. The funeral was held this afternoon at two o'clock at the residence on North Church street, Rev. I. L. Cory officiating. Interment was made in the village cemetery.

Miss Bessie White has resigned her position as operator at the central of the Clinton Telephone Co., much to the regret of the officers and patrons of the company as she has been a faithful, patient and efficient operator. Miss Minnie Reimer has been employed to take her place.

The United Workers and any other ladies wishing to attend will be entertained by Mesdames C. P. Drake, James Winegar and E. B. Kizer Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. C. P. Drake. All ladies of Clinton, regardless of church affiliations, are invited to be present.

The lecture at the Baptist church next Friday evening by Rev. Clyde McGee of Chicago, is eagerly anticipated by a large proportion of our citizens as a great treat is in store for all who hear Rev. McGee give his great subject, "Laughter and Tears."

Playing with Fire:

There's a great deal of merchandise made just to sell. A great deal of this kind is sold. The store selling it thinks it is profiting by such sales. The reverse is true. The only kind of goods it pays a store to handle is reliable merchandise. No store that hopes to forge into the first rank will ever realize its expectations until it ceases to handle "cheap" goods. A low price point is always commendable, providing it applies to a trustworthy article, but to quote low prices at the expense of quality is playing with fire. ADDITIONAL TABLES REQUIRED AT SHOW

LARGE NUMBER OF EXHIBITS REQUIRES BETTER ACCOMMODATIONS FOR DISPLAY.

LARGE CROWD TODAY

Yesterday's Snow-Fall Makes Sleighing Good Which is a Point in Favor of Attendance.

Those in charge of the mid-winter fair now in progress at the auditorium were kept busy all the morning receiving and placing the exhibits which continued to arrive. In fact, almost as many products were brought in today as yesterday and two more long tables were set up in the center of the floor to accommodate the display.

"There are still a lot of exhibits to be received," said Secretary Lane this morning. "We knew that our prize list would bring out keen competition in all the departments, and we are quite satisfied with the showing. The work of judging will begin tomorrow. Prof. Graber of the university college of agriculture will have charge of the grain, and other competent judges will be secured for the other departments."

The showing in the grain department is especially large. This is due to the fact that the county grain growers' association has united its efforts with the local commercial club to make this department one of the big features of the fair. Some thirty bushels of oats entered by as many different growers are on display, and barley has a like representation. Corn is another grain which has a fine showing. Tushel boxes of the yellow and white varieties and strings of ten ears of the favorite Wisconsin grades.

A number of Janesville merchants have reserved space for displays and curbs of merchandise busy this morning arranging the various booths.

There was a good crowd at the rink this afternoon which marked the formal opening of the show. The snow-fall of last evening has made the sleighing first class which will have a good effect on the fair attendance. Wednesday and Thursday will be big days and the rink will doubtless be crowded to capacity in the afternoon when the lectures by the agricultural experts will be given.

Visitors at the fair today were enthusiastic in their praise. "It's the biggest thing for the farmers of the section which has ever been undertaken," declared one farmer this morning. "There is nothing of the kind in the northwest which can beat it, and the Janesville merchants deserve all kinds of praise for making it possible."

That the farmers and their wives have done their part toward making the fair a triumphant success will be seen instantly by the fine lot of exhibits. The show is open to the public free of charge and city people as well as country dwellers are urged to attend and see what kind of products are raised in Rock county.

PREFER TO CHANGE PLEAS RATHER THAN BE DETAINED

Carl Nelson and Matthew Novel Declared They were Not Drunk and Then Reconsidered Decision.
Expediency was the motive that directed Matthew Novel and Carl Nelson, arraigned for intoxication in the municipal court this morning, to change their plea. Both at first denied that they were drunk although admitting that they had drunk a few glasses of beer. Their trial was set for two o'clock this afternoon and they were being returned to their cells when they decided to come back and plead guilty. Back was fined $2 and costs. Nelson, who recently came here from Davenport, Iowa, was anxious to return to work, and Novel desired to return to Madison. Both promised to keep out of trouble here in the future.

JANESVILLE-MADISON INTERURBAN LINE IS A PROBABLE PROJECT

Capital Behind Beloit-Delavan Road Will Construct Road to Madison, Is Persistent Rumor.

That a corps of engineers will be employed to make a survey for an interurban line between Janesville and Madison as soon as the weather is favorable, and that the project will be pushed by capital from the Bank of France at Paris, the same institution which is behind the Beloit to Delavan road, are some of the rumors which were current in Janesville today.

A representative of the company was in the city yesterday, and it was understood would return within a few days, to make further arrangements in regard to the proposed road. That the company which is promoting the enterprise means business is taken from the quiet manner in which they are proceeding. Nothing definite as to the American firms interested in the project has been learned but a more satisfactory announcement will doubtless be forthcoming from the promoters at an early date, or as soon as their plans have been fully arrived at.

Janesville men who had talked with the representatives of the concern, could give no other information that the line was being projected and that it looked like a sure thing.

SCHMIDT LOSES CASE AGAINST INTERURBAN

Jury's Verdict After Several Hours' Deliberation, Finds Him Guilty of Contributory Negligence.

Anthony I. Schmidt of Beloit, lost his $5,000 damage suit against the Rockford and Interurban company according to the verdict returned by the jury at three o'clock this afternoon which decided that he was guilty of contributory negligence which produced his injury and that the defendant was not negligent in the management and operation of its car at the time and place of the accident. FIND FROZEN CORPSE OF JAMES DOYLE IN WOODS THIS MORNING

Boys Inspecting Their Traps in Woods On Shoemaker Farm Discover Remains of Poor Farm

Boys inspecting their traps in the woods on the Shoemaker farm near the Four Mile Bridge this morning found buried underneath the snow the frozen corpse of James ("Jimmy") Doyle, a Janesville inmate of the county poor farm who wandered away two weeks ago. It is believed that Doyle froze to death as it is not known that he was afflicted with any disease that would cause him to die suddenly. The remains were brought to this city after they had been identified by Superintendent Barless of the county hospital. He is not known to have any relatives. Doyle, who was about sixty years of age, had made his home at the county farm off and on for several years past. He worked as a laborer on the city streets and for the railways when in this city. Arrangements for his funeral have not yet been made.

WILSON TAKES OATH AS NEW PRESIDENT OF UNITED STATES

From the White House to the Capitol steel cables strung along the curb held back the spectators and traffic was suspended.

Taft Signs Bills. At the Capitol the Committee of Arrangements was ready to conduct Mr. Taft and Mr. Wilson to the marble chamber known as the President's room, just off the lobby leading to the Senate chamber. Others of the committee waited to conduct Mr. Marshall and Senator Gallinger to the Vice-President's room, at the opposite end of the Senate lobby.

The arrival of the Presidential party was timed to bring it to the Capitol a full hour before the opening of the actual inauguration ceremony at noon. This was to give sufficient time to Mr. Taft to sign bills being passed in the last hour of the expiring 62d Congress. The cabinet of the outgoing President accompanied him, to inspect the newly passed bills pertaining to the President as to his signature or veto.

Members of the Senate and House of Representatives were pressing matters to a final conclusion, in the hurry to have all legislative business cleared well before noon. In the House there were the usual closing exercises, with resolutions of thanks to the Speaker. It was the aim of the leaders to close the proceedings sufficiently before noon to permit the membership of the House to march in a body to the Senate wing of the Capitol, there to take the seats set apart for them in the Senate chamber for the inauguration ceremonies of the Vice-President.

Throngs in Galleries.

Senate galleries were thronged early with a brilliant assemblage in which women largely predominated, their gowns and hats giving a gala appearance to the upper portion of the chamber. The diplomatic galleries were strictly reserved for the families of the representatives of foreign governments, and the President and Vice-President's galleries for the families of the incoming and outgoing executives. Until the ceremonies of inaugurating the new Vice-President, began these animated galleries were the centre of attraction.

The program provided for the entrance of the Supreme Court, the House and other bodies at specified intervals, from 11:30 to noon, leading up to the actual ceremonies. While the Supreme Court, was being announced and the sombre-robed justices accompanied by the officers of the court, found large leather chairs, placed along the front row of the chamber, facing the Vice-President, and at his right, the diplomatic corps, brilliantly arrayed in full state costume assembled in the outside corridor prepared to enter in a body.

Justice White Leads.

When the Supreme Court was announced, Chief Justice White leading the procession entered the Senate Chamber, followed by Associate Justice Lamar, Hughes, McKenna, Holmes, Lurion, Day, Van Devanter and Pitney.

The representatives of foreign nations came next, headed by Ambassador Jusserand, of France, dean of the diplomatic corps in the absence of the venerable Baron Hengemiller, the Ambassador of Austria, who is absent from his post on leave and is not to return.

The Rt. Hon. James Bryce, the British Ambassador, was next, followed in order of seniority by Count Von Bernstorff, the Ambassador from Germany; Youssef Zia Pacha the Ambassador from Turkey; the Marquis Cusani Confalonieri, the Ambassador from Italy; Senor De Gama, the Ambassador from Brazil; George Bakhatieff, the Ambassador from Russia; the Viscount Chinda, Ambassador from Japan; and followed by the ministers and their suites from Portugal, Bolivia, Salvador, Netherlands, Venezuela, Switzerland, Greece, China, Spain, Ecuador, Norway, Nicaragua, Cuba, Argentina, Uruguay, Chile, Belgium, Haiti, Guatemala, the Dominican Republic, Peru, Sweden, Siam, Colombia, Denmark, Panama and Persia. The ambassadors and ministers have seats immediately behind the space reserved for the Cabinet.

Clark Heads Congressmen.

Meanwhile the House of Representatives formed in double file down the long corridor toward the House wing of the Capitol and accompanied by the members-elect soon to take places in the next Congress, marched slowly to the Senate door, and headed by Speaker Clark, for whom a seat had been placed on the rostrum at the left of Senator Gallinger, as President pro tempore of the Senate, found seats reserved on the west side of the chamber, the east being held for Senators and others.

Other places reserved in the chamber were for Admiral Dewey and his aide, Major General Leonard Wood, Chief of Staff of the Army, and his aide, and officers of the Army and Navy, who by name have received the thanks of Congress. Among these were Rear Admiral Peary, the distinguished Arctic explorer. When this part of the program was carried out the next move was to escort the President, President-elect and Vice-President-elect to the chamber. The two most conspicuous seats in the chamber were reserved for Mr. Wilson and Mr. Marshall, both of which faced the presiding officer, Mr. Wilson in the front row to the right of the main aisle, and Mr. Marshall to the left. Seats for the Cabinet and the Committee on Arrangements were close by.

With the entrance of President Taft and President-elect Wilson at the main door of the Senate, escorted by the Committee on Arrangements, and the entrance of Mr. Marshall and Senator Gallinger, also escorted by the same committee, the stage was set for the inauguration of the new Vice-President.

Marshall Takes Oath.

First in the order of the proceedings was the administering of the oath of office to Vice-President Marshall. Arising from his seat among the Senators, the new Vice-President was escorted to the Senate rostrum to the right of the presiding officer. The officer of Vice-President being vacant by the death of James S. Sherman, the administration of the oath to the new Vice-President fell to the lot of Senator Gallinger. This was a brief ceremony, followed with impressive silence as the oath was slowly repeated by the new official, standing with up-raised hand.

Vice-President Marshall had now been formally installed as the presiding officer of the Senate. This much accomplished, the Senate of the 62d Congress adjourned sine die, to reorganize immediately as the new Senate of the 63d Congress, with its new presiding officer directing its affairs. A prayer by the Chairman of the Senate was the first formal action of the newly organized Senate. With this solemn function over, Vice-President Marshall delivered his inaugural address.

New Senators Sworn.

It remained only to complete the organization of the new Senate by administering the oath to Senators re-elected to the body.

The returning Democratic Senators to take the oath were: Bankhead of Alabama; Bacon of Georgia; Simmons of North Carolina; Owen, of Oklahoma; Thomas, of South Carolina; Sheppard of Texas, and Martin of Virginia.

The re-elected Republicans were: Borah, of Idaho; Kenyon, of Iowa; Nelson of Minnesota, and Warren of Wyoming.

The new Democratic members of the body were John T. Robinson, of Arkansas; John F. Shafroth, of Colorado; William Saulsbury, of Delaware; William H. Thompson, of Kansas; Ollie M. James, of Kentucky; Joseph E. Ransdell, of Louisiana; James K. Vardaman, of Mississippi; Thomas J. Walsh, of Montana; William Hughes, of New Jersey; Harry Lane, of Oregon; and John K. Shields of Tennessee.

The Important Ceremony.

At this point the inaugural ceremonies passed from the stage of quiet and solemnity of the Senate chamber to one full of color and animation as the out-door exercises of administering the oath to the new President began. The crowd of spectators in the Capitol, the shadow of the great dome, an immense stand to hold thousands had been erected. At the front and center of this vast stage were arranged the seats for President Taft and President-elect Wilson, Chief Justice White about to administer the oath of office, was seated at the right of the President-elect. Flanking this central group were the Associate Justices of the Supreme Court, the Vice-President Senators and former Senators. Back of them were ranged the members of the House of Representatives, the ambassadors and ministers of foreign nations. In groups here and there were Governors of states, many of them with their showy staffs of military and civil officials. Members of the retiring cabinet, officers of the army and navy, and representatives of the various branches of the federal government also had their places on the broad platform.

Wilson is President.

Facing the inaugural platform a dense crowd of spectators packed the wide plaza and struggled for vantage point, while further back the long lines of military civic organizations took position to await the formation of the parade.

With this setting of animation, all attention was directed to the two central figures of the assemblage—the President-elect about to take the oath of office, and the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, ready to administer the oath. These two, rising from their seats, stood together at the center of the platform, the Chief Justice with the bible open in his hand, the President-elect with uplifted right hand.

Slowly the Chief Justice repeated the oath as it is prescribed by the Constitution: "I do solemnly swear (or affirm) that I will faithfully execute the office of President of the United States, and will to the best of my ability, preserve, protect and defend the Constitution of the United States."

The President-elect repeated the oath word for word, and kissed the open bible. It was over. A new President had come into office.

Salute is Fired.

At the moment of conclusion of the oath a Presidential salute of twenty-one guns boomed out the news that a new Chief Executive had been inaugurated.

The President at once began his inaugural address. There has been a change of government. It began two years ago, when the house of representatives became democratic by a decisive majority. It has now been completed. The Senate about to assemble will also be democratic. The office of president and vice-president have been put into the hands of democrats. What does the change mean? That is the question that is uppermost in our minds today. That is the question I am going to try to answer, in order, if I may, to interpret the occasion.

It means much more than the mere success of a party. The success of a party means little except when the nation is using that party for a large and definite purpose. No one can mistake the purpose for which the nation now seeks to use the democratic party. It seeks to use it to interpret a change in its own plans and point of view. Some old things with which we had grown familiar, and which had begun to creep into the very habit of our thought and of our lives, have altered their aspect as we have latterly looked critically upon them, with fresh, awakened eyes; have dropped their disguises and shown themselves alien and sinister. Some new things, as we look frankly upon them, willing to comprehend their real character, have come to assume the aspect of things long believed in and familiar, stuff of our own convictions. We have been refreshed by a new insight into our own life.

We see that in many things that life is very great. It is incomparably great in its material aspects, in its body of wealth, in the diversity and sweep of its energy, in the industries which have been conceived and built up by the genius of individual men and the limitless enterprise of groups of men. It is great, also, very great, in its moral force. Nowhere else in the world have noble men and women exhibited in more striking forms the beauty and the energy of sympathy and helpfulness and counsel in their efforts to rectify wrong, alleviate suffering, and set the weak in the way of strength and hope. We have built up, moreover, a great system of government, which has stood through a long age as in many respects a model for those who seek to set liberty upon foundations that will endure against fortuitous change, against storm and accident. Our life contains every great thing and contains it in rich abundance.

But the evil has come with the good, and much fine gold has been corroded. With riches has come inexhaustible waste. We have squandered a great part of what we might have used, and have not stopped to conserve the exceeding bounty of nature, without which our genius for enterprise would have been worthless and impotent, scorning to be careful, shamefully prodigal as well as admirably efficient. We have been proud of our industrial achievements, but we have not hitherto stopped thoughtfully enough to count the human cost, the cost of lives snuffed out, of energies overtaxed and broken, the fearful physical and spiritual cost to the men and women and children upon whom the dead weight and burden of it all has fallen pitilessly the years through. The groans and agony of it all had not yet reached our ears, the solemn, moving undertone of our life, coming up out of the mines and factories and out of every home where the struggle had its intimate and familiar seat. With the great government went many deep secret things which we too long delayed to look into and scrutinize with candid, fearless eyes. The great government we loved has too long been made use of for private and selfish purposes, and those who used it had forgotten the people.

At last a vision has been vouchsafed us of our life as a whole. We see the bad with the good, the debased and decadent with the sound and vital. With this vision we approach new affairs. Our duty is to cleanse, to reconsider, to restore, to correct the evil without impairing the good, to purify and humanize every process of our common life without weakening or sentimentalizing it. There has been something crude and heartless and unfeeling in our haste to succeed and to get on. Our thought has been, "Let every man look out for himself, let every generation look out for itself," while we reared giant machinery which made it impossible that any but those who stood at the levers of control should have a change to look out for themselves. We had not forgotten our morals. We remembered well enough that we had set up a policy which was meant to serve the humblest as well as the most powerful, with an eye single to the standards of justice and fair play, and remembered it with pride. But we were very heedless and in a hurry to be great.

We have come now to the sober second thought. The scales of heathenishness have fallen from our eyes. We have made up our minds to square every process of our national life again with the standards we so proudly set up at the beginning and have always carried at our hearts. Our work is a work of restoration.

We have itemized with some degree of particularity the things that ought to be altered and here are some of the chief items: A tariff which cuts off from our proper part in the commerce of the world, violates the just principles of taxation, and makes the government a facile instrument in the hands of private interests; a banking and currency system based upon the necessity of the government to sell its bonds fifty years ago and perfectly adapted to concentrating cash and restricting credits; an industrial system which, take it on all its sides, financial as well as administrative, holds capital in leading strings, restricts the liberties and limits the opportunities of labor, and exploits without renewing or conserving the natural resources of the country; a body of agricultural activities never yet given the efficiency of great business undertakings or served as it should be through the instrumentality of science taken directly to the farm, or afforded the facilities of credit best suited to its technical needs; watercourses undeveloped, waste places unreclaimed, forests untended, fast disappearing without plan or prospect of renewal, unregarded waste heaps at every mine. We have studied as perhaps no other nation has the most effective means of production, but we have not studied cost or economy as we should either as organizers of industry, as statesmen, or as individuals, and perfected the means by which government may be put at the service of humanity, in safeguarding the health of the nation, the health of its men and its women and its children, as well as their rights in the struggle for existence. This is no sentimental duty. The firm basis of government is justice, not pity. These are matters of justice. There can be no equality or opportunity, the first essential of justice in the body politics, if men and women and children be not shielded in their lives, their very vitality, from the consequences of great industrial and social processes which they cannot alter, control, or singly cope with. Society must see to it that it does not itself crush or weaken or damage its own constituent parts. The first duty of law is to keep sound the society it serves. Sanitary laws, pure food laws, and laws determining conditions of labor which individuals are powerless to determine for themselves are intimate parts of the very business of justice and legal efficiency.

These are some of the things we ought to do, and not leave the others undone, the old-fashioned, never-to-be-neglected, fundamental safeguarding of property and of individual rights. This is the high enterprise of the new day: to lift everything that concerns our life as a nation to the light that shines from the hearthfire of every man's conscience and vision of the right. It is inconceivable that we should do this as partisans; it is inconceivable we should do it in ignorance of the facts as they are or in blind haste. We shall restore, not destroy. We shall deal with our economic system as it is and as it may be modified, not as it might be if we had a clean sheet of paper to write upon; and step by step we shall make it what it should be, in the spirit of those who consider their own wisdom and seek counsel and knowledge, not shallow self-satisfaction or the excitement of excursions

A BUSINESS PROPOSITION

The Proposition to Patronize Home Industries and Build up Your Home Community is Not Founded Solely on Patriotism and Civic Pride. It is Grounded in Sound Business Principles.

Copyrighted 1912, by Edgar Taylor Wheelock.

No man has a right to criticize another for trying to better his condition. It is every man's duty to do that very thing. In purchasing those things that are necessary for his comfort and maintenance, it is every man's right and duty to make the best bargain he can.

These statements of truth are axiomatic. They are so unquestionably true that argument is not required to prove them.

Must Strike a Balance

But if, in making a deal, a gain in one direction is offset by a loss in another, it is necessary to strike a balance before the net gain or loss can be ascertained. An apparent gain may prove to be an actual loss when the balance is struck.

Take the case of a farmer, for instance. Every farmer is a business man. He works with his hands, it is true, but he also works, or should, with his head. The more he uses his head in his business, the more prosperous he becomes.

He sells and he buys. He is a producer and a consumer. In order that he may consume, he must first produce. To the end that he may produce that with which to buy what he consumes, he must first sell that which he produces.

The Home Town Market

The farmer's market is the local town. If it be a good market, he should support it by every means in his power, in order that it may become better. If it falls in any particular to meet his demands, he should study and co-operate with his fellow citizens to build it up and make it good.

Does the patron of the catalogue house follow this course? Does he not, on the contrary, do all in his power to destroy his home market? By contributing to the destruction of his home marketing and trading center the catalogue buyer decreases his own earning capacity. Here is an actual loss to offset the apparent gain he may make in the alleged low cost of the goods he buys away from home.

Charge to Loss Account

But there are other losses as well. He frequently buys inferior goods, for which he pays exorbitant prices. He impoverishes his community by sending away the capital needed to do the business of the community. He prevents his property from increasing in value by reducing the volume of local business.

He reduces the assessed valuation of the property of the community by reducing the amount of business transacted by local merchants, their stocks of goods and the capital invested.

By preventing the local retailers from expanding their business, he helps to make his local trading center a "bum town," that does not attract visitors, who might otherwise come either for business or pleasure. Traveling salesmen avoid towns where merchants are on the down grade in a business way because the people who should patronize them are catalogue traders.

The loss of business through this agency affects every class of citizens—bankers, newspaper publishers, hotel keepers, professional men, wage earners—all consumers of farm products.

The Greatest Loss of All

The young men and women who have a desire to accomplish something before they are too old to do things worth while leave town and go to the cities, where they too frequently become victims of the nerve-racking, soul destroying conditions that are incidental to the congested centers of population.

These are some of the losses that must be charged up against the problematical profits found in the mail order trader's catalogues. And they are real, tangible business losses. If all the facts could be gathered with respect to any town suffering from the catalogue trading affliction, the losses of this character could be partly expressed in terms of dollars and cents. Then there would remain over a social and moral loss that can never be measured.

Let the mail order trader think on these things.

whether they cannot tell. Justice, and only justice, shall always be our motto.

And yet it will be no cool process of mere science. The nation has been deeply stirred, stirred by a solemn passion, stirred by the knowledge of wrong, of ideals lost, of government too often debauched and made an instrument of evil. The feelings with which we face this new age of right and opportunity sweep across our heart-strings like some air out of God's own presence, where justice and mercy are necessary and the judge and the brother are one. We know our task to be no mere task of politics but a task which shall search us through and through, whether we be able to understand our time and the need of our people, whether we be indeed their spokesmen and interpreters, whether we have the pure heart to comprehend and the rectified will to choose our high course of action.

This is not a day of triumph; it is a day of dedication. Here must be the forces of party, but the forces of humanity. Men's hearts wait upon us; men's lives hang in the balance; men's hopes call upon us to say what we will do. Who shall live up to the great trust? Who dares fail to try? I summon all honest men, all patriotic, all forward-looking men, to my side. God helping me, I will not fail them, if they will but counsel and sustain me!

At the conclusion of the inaugural address, the program called for the Senate to return to its Chamber, either to confirm appointments or adjourn to a later day while the House stands adjourned to the date of the extra session to be called by the new President. At the head of the new President procession the President rode back to the White House to review the pageant and begin the duties of his office.

EGGS TAKE SUDDEN DROP DUE TO LARGE SUPPLY ON MARKET.

A welcome drop in eggs took place this morning, the price lowering from twenty-five cents to twenty and twenty-two. This is a welcome change and it is hoped that the prices will remain below twenty cents.

Butter still remains firm and bids fair to do so for some time to come. Creamery is still at the forty-cent mark and dairy at thirty-five. Many people are seeking relief from the high price of butter by using oleomargarine, which sells from twenty to twenty-two cents per pound.

WOMAN'S PAGE

The Evening Chit-Chat
BY RUTH CAMERON

YIELDING TO GOOD IMPULSES.

THE other day, in a street car a woman across the aisle from us leaned forward and informed the woman in front of her that part of her waist was nubtuned.

Naturally, the lady was extremely embarrassed at this discovery, but not too much to thank her informant with the most evident gratitude and the most cordial good manners.

"Well, now," said my seat companion, as the lady with the nubtuned waist successfully hid it by slipping on her coat, "I've been watching that waist for the last five minutes and wondering if I'd better tell her about it, but I didn't quite dare to because you never can tell just how people will take anything like that."

Do you know, I think there are a great many people in the world like this woman. They come right to the brink of kind acts, and then hang back because of some scruple or other. They are afraid of being misunderstood; they are afraid of being unconventional; they are afraid of being conspicuous; they are afraid of goodness knows what; and so they hang back, and the opportunity passes.

What woman struggling with a heavy suit case has not sometimes looked wistfully at the broad shouldered men swinging past her, and wished that one of them would offer to carry the burden that to him would be no burden at all?

We were speaking of this matter, and this is what an unquestionably kind-hearted man had to say. "Yes, I often think I'd like to help some woman when I see her struggling along, but I'm always afraid she'll think I'm trying to pick up an acquaintance."

As if any woman worth the name would not accept such assistance properly if it were offered in the proper manner!

I have seldom denied a kind impulse without regretting it. Once upon a time I wanted very much to invite a new neighbor into my home on Christmas eve. She was alone, and I felt she must be lonely. But just because I did not know her very well, and because she had a little more money than the rest of us, I was afraid.

Later in our friendship I told her about it, and when I asked her if she really was lonely that night, the tears stood in her eyes. "Oh, my dear," she said, "I'm glad you don't know how lonely."

That experience has made me more willing to brave the danger in kind impulses. And after all, what is the danger? A rebuff? But that will hurt him far more than you.

We often know that there will be unpleasant consequences if we yield to our bad impulses, and yet, how easily we yield! How is this for a resolution—to be as afraid of our wrong impulses as we have been of the kind ones, and to yield to the kind impulses as easily as we have to the wrong.

Unpolished Rice.

There is rice and rice! It may be polished or unpolished. It may be cooked so that every kernel sticks together into a heavy solid mass, or it may be cooked until every kernel stands alone, dry, tender and flaky, fit to "set before the king" or the invalid too, for that matter. The latter way is the method of cooking we wish to talk about. But before that, a little about the unpolished rice and its relative food value.

The producer of rice has frequently left it with glucose, paraffin, or some other foreign substance, to appeal to our eye, having it bright and shiny, then charging us for this extra work. In doing so he has also removed the rich outer covering, which is far richer than the grain. When rice is left in its natural unpolished condition, we have all the rice elements retained. A few years ago while giving a lecture on "Rice," I noticed a man and woman in the audience who seemed very much interested in our subject. After the lecture they came up to congratulate us on our knowledge and method of cooking rice. They said they had lived fourteen years in India and they had not eaten rice had it cooked since they left there as on this day. They further added that they ate only the unpolished rice in India, although it almost entirely did them good both meat and starch value. As with many other investigations along the food line rice values are not complete, but at present the unpolished rice is far in the lead. This is a great item, as the rice is from 3 to 5 cents a pound cheaper.

No matter what rice however is used, much of its food value depends upon the cooking. It is a starchy food, fairly bulking over with heat and energy, easily digested and leaves little if any residue in the intestines. A few years ago rice was only used as a dessert. Now it is considered a valuable food and should be used as a vegetable instead of potatoes two or three times a week or oftener where there are children or older people in the family.

Cooking Rice.

Rice may be steamed, boiled in only enough water to be entirely absorbed when done, or boiled in plenty of water and using that which is drained for the rice as a basis for soup.

Where all vegetables are saved. But where this is not possible cooking the rice (after thoroughly washing) in plenty of rapidly boiling water, adding a fourth of a teaspoonful of butter to keep it from boiling over. Do not stir but keep it boiling rapidly so that every kernel is tossed lively about. It takes from 15 to 20 minutes to cook the rice, break up the starch by this boiling temperature to make it digestible. When done, turn through a colander and save the water for soups, then blanch by letting cold water run slowly over the rice. Set the colander on a pan in the oven to dry and while preparing the remainder of the meal occasionally toss it up and down. Sprinkle with salt, turn into a vegetable dish and every kernel should be large, white, dry and flaky. Serve as potatoes.

Rice may be served in many different ways and if a little is left over, it can always be added to soup, croquettes, with cheese, tomatoes, puddings, fritters or used as a rice border with a meat stew.

Rice Mold.

Boil one cup of rice as described above. Drain when done and while still hot, line a mold, bottom and sides at least an inch thick. Have ready one pint of cold meat cut in small pieces, well seasoned and moistened with any good sauce, brown, or toasted sauce with green peppers. Cover with the rice and steam or bake in a pan of hot water for forty minutes. Turn from the mold onto a hot platter and serve with sauce around it. This is a very good way to use remnants of a roast.

Modern Astronomy.

The popular idea of the astronomer, says a writer in the World's Work, as one who spends his time in sleeping by day and peering through the small end of a telescope by night, must be dismissed. "The greater part of the modern astronomer's time," says the article, "is spent in studying photographs," often with a microscope. "Paradoxical as it may seem, an astronomer today gazes more often through a telescope."

EXCLUSIVE WHEAT DIET.

"I will venture the prediction," says Dr. Harvey Wiley, "that one who eats a well prepared cereal with milk, as his principal diet, can thereby afford the small quantities of meat, fruits and vegetables which are necessary for a complete diet, and will be practically insured against most diseases which come from a deranged digestion." As a result of much experience in directing the diet of others in health and disease, I would go a little further than the noted authority on diet, and say, confidently, that any man who will make entire wheat cooked in the fireless cooker, with a little milk, his exclusive diet, will soon become conspicuous for good health, good feeling and immunity not only from digestive, but from all other diseases. This is not saying that everybody would do well immediately to adopt this diet, for there are other monodiet diets that would be better in certain cases.

HEART and HOME PROBLEMS
BY MRS. ELIZABETH THOMPSON

Dear Mrs. Thompson—(1) What will keep my face from sweating, especially my nose? I am a girl of seventeen. (2) How can I stop my brother, nine years old from sucking his thumb? We make fun of him but he does it anyway. (3) How often should I wear a corset?

(4) How can I make my back straight? It is a humped back and I am ashamed to go out.

(1)—Wipe face often with extract of witch hazel. (2) Is your brother alone on the thumb. Tell him you will wash his mouth out with soap every time he sucks his thumb, and keep your word if he does. (3) You will be healthier if you do not wear a corset at all.

(4) I am afraid there is no cure, my dear, unless you can see a great surgeon. Just make up your mind that the good Lord put the hump there to hide your angelic wings, and be so sweet and lovable that everybody will be glad to have you around. The hump is nothing to be ashamed of. Go out and take walks and meet people and make the world brighter because you live in it.

Dear Mrs. Thompson—(1) When introducing a gentleman of old acquaintance to a lady, should I present the lady first?

(2) Is it always proper to present the lady to the man, regardless of friendship? (3) When seeking a lady for a dance, what words are proper; also, when dance is over, what should be said. Is it necessary to thank her? (4) When making an acquaintance at a dance, is it proper to ask the lady for a dance?

A BEGINNER.
(1) Present the gentleman to the lady. (2) The man should always be presented to the lady. It is customary to ask a lady's permission to introduce a man as: "Miss Blank, permit me to introduce to you Mr. Jones." (2) "Miss Blank may I have the pleasure of this dance with you?" At the close of the dance, say anything pleasant and appropriate, such as "I have certainly enjoyed this dance." Or "Thanks for the pleasant time you've given me."

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a girl of 18 going to high school and they call me good looking. My mother has always said that if she found out I cared for any of the boys, she would take me out of school. (1)—I think I am in love with two fellows. They seem to return my affection. Now how am I to know which one I like the best, and ought I to tell my mother about it?

(2)—Ought I to allow them to bring me candy and flowers, etc.? (3)—Is it proper for a girl to tell a man to whom she has been introduced that she is glad to have met him, or is it his place to tell her?

TROUBLED MARY.
(1)—You are really not in love with either, Mary, my dear. Be good friends with the boys and don't allow your foolishness. Ask them to visit at your home, and let your mother get acquainted with them. You will judge what kind of a man you really like. (2)—Candy and flowers are all ways acceptable. (3)—If you are glad to know him, say so without gushing it.

To Raise Yams.

Will you permit me to answer a question I am asked every fall and spring by my numerous friends? I tell them, yet they forget. This way they will reach more of them than any other paper I can put it in. The question is: "How do you keep your yams (sweet potatoes) so nice?" The answer is: In August I begin to use my yams. Every time I dig a mess, as I wash them I pick out one or two of the nicest ones, not much scratched, and lay them on the cupboard or sink in the kitchen, where they can dry out. Next mess I do the same thing, until I have about eight good-sized ones.

Now, they lie around this way until about November 1; then I get a man's shoe box. In the box you will find two soft white papers. Put one in the bottom of the box, lay in the yams (which will just fit nicely over the bottom) lay on the other white paper, put lid on box, and set on top of the cupboard. Leave them up there until March, when you want to sprout them. They will not freeze. The coming summer, do the same thing and you will always have all the sprouts you want at home. Now, lady friends, please cut this out.

Things Worth Knowing.

The popcorn that has been in the grocery store for some time, exposed to the dust, etc., is one of the most filthy things that children can eat. Before I pop the corn for my family, I hold it under the cold water faucet and give it a good scrubbing with a small stiff vegetable brush. Water does not harm corn; in fact, corn hops all the better.

To keep butter fresh—Pack in jar and cover with pieces of nice clean cloth, then cover with salt. If butter is nice and fresh and well-worked out it will keep for some time.

The Housewife.

Dustless dust cloth—One pint of coal oil, one-third ounce oil of paraffin, 5 cents' worth of oil of lavender; mix all well. This amount will wet six yards material (black cheese-cloth) is the best, but old stockings or underwear does just as well; always use black). Dampen and hang out in the air a few minutes, then keep them in some old vessel that has a lid, until needed. Anyone who tries this will never dust again with just any sort of dust cloth. I use all my cloths until too dirty, then wash them out in hot suds, dry them and dip again.

Washing fluid—One can concentrate lye, one ounce borax, one ounce salts of tartar, one ounce sal ammoniac. Dissolve one can in five two quarts soft boiling water, then add other ingredients; add enough water to make two gallons. Use one-half cup for boiler of clothes. Can wash clothes first or put clothes before rubbing into cold water, let come to

The Power behind the dough

You may use an old favorite recipe and the best of materials and make it carefully, the oven may be just right, yet you will have a failure if "The Power behind the Dough" is not the right one to leaven it properly and make it light, digestible, wholesome.

Good baking without good baking powder is out of the question. K. C. Baking Powder has wonderful leavening power, and the double action—in the bowl and in the oven—makes good results doubly certain.

Take no chances of failure—use K. C. and have "good luck" every time. At all Grocers.

COMPANY DISHES.

Roquefort Salad.—A most delicious salad is prepared from head lettuce, well washed, dried and chilled. Dispose carefully in a salad bowl and sprinkle with broken bits of Roquefort cheese. Rub the bowl with the cut side of a clove of garlic, put a half teaspoonful of salt into a small bowl, a few dashes of cayenne, a tablespoonful of chili sauce and one of vinegar, four of olive oil. Mix well and pour over the lettuce, adding more of the dressing if this seems not enough. Serve cold.

Frozen Rice with Peaches.—Take a cup of freshly boiled rice, add a pinch of salt, and cool it; add a pint of whipped cream and four tablespoonfuls of powdered sugar, flavor with almond and pack in ice in a mold. When the rice is unmolded, put tablespoonfuls of sweetened and flavored whipped cream around it, with a preserved peach between each two, and one peach on top of the mold, also decorated with a little of the cream.

Apple Balls.—Peel large apples, and with a potato scoop cut in small balls; drop them in water to keep them white. Add a bit of vinegar to the water. Prepare a mixture of pineapple, banana, grape juice pulp and put into glasses. Decorate the top of each with a few of the apple balls. Pour over all a boiled cider slightly thickened by boiling with sugar; cool before using. Serve cold.

Lettuce and Mint.—Sprinkle minced mint over head lettuce, pour over French dressing and serve chilled.

Cauliflower served in an Edam cheese shell not only adds flavor to the dish, but it is also much more attractive.

the line dripping. It will dry without a crease or wrinkle, will be as straight and fluffy as when new.

When washing overalls or anything hard to wash, after laying them flat on the washboard rub the dirty spots with soap and scrub with a good stiff scrubbing brush. Have found this much better than rubbing by hand.

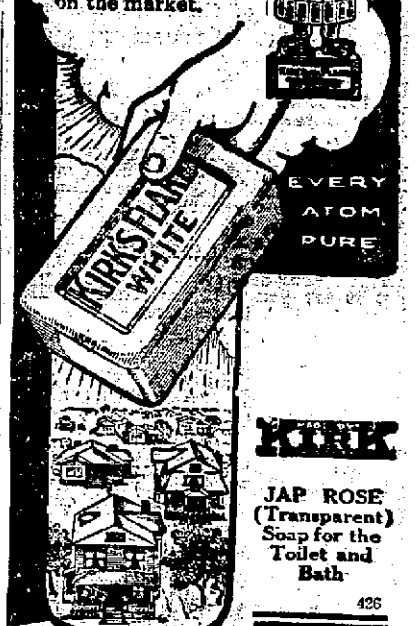

At most everybody doing her own paperhanging has wallpaper left over. It makes just dandy paper for the pantry and cupboard shelves, turning the white side up.

The Gain of a Climb

Is there anything in the world about us so full of thoughtful help for every day living, as mountains?

"I will look unto the mountains, from whence cometh my help," sings the psalmist. And he drew from the mountains, inspiration, a thousand fold in character.

And a study of the mountains will yield us a like profit.

Did you ever stop to think that those who live on the mountain top have a longer day than those who live in the valley?—a longer period of glorious sunshine, and blue sky, and songs of birds, and brightness generally?

Isn't it worth while to lengthen our days in this way, to fill them full of light and song and joy?

And how can we do that?

Will it not be by climbing up a little bit higher in our understanding of life, of our friends, even of ourselves, and our abilities and failings? Sometimes just getting a broader view of these things will fill life with more brightness and gladness.

Perhaps we are living in a little, narrow, dark valley of what we can do. Why not climb a bit, take a broader look and see if we can't do bigger things.

Think how bright and glad our days will be, if we rise to some big, fine work.

Perhaps we are living in a little canyon, shut in by our faults. By all means, climb and see how really little they are in comparison with the big world, and how easily conquered, if we will take them in hand with the energy and enthusiasm this broader outlook has given us.

Perhaps we are dwelling in a flat, uninteresting valley of lack of understanding of our fellow men.

What joy is before us then in climbing to a more sympathetic understanding of humanity.

In fact, in hundreds of ways, will we be benefited by climbing up to this longer, brighter day that we will gain, by a better understanding of ourselves, of our fellow beings, of life.

But it will be a climb. We must study ourselves and see what abilities we have that we are not using. We must study ourselves and see what we lack. We must study those about us to discover wherein we are non-appreciative of them, or perhaps fail in thoughtfulness and helpfulness. We must study life, and this is the biggest problem of all, to discover the purpose of it. But as we begin to thus climb, the days begin to lengthen, and brightness and joy flood into them.

So it is worth while.

GOLD DUST does more than clean

Gold Dust sterilizes and leaves your kitchen things sanitariously safe. The ordinary soap-washed utensil is not fit to eat from, because soap does not cleanse as thoroughly as it should—does not kill germs of decay which are bound to lurk in oft-used utensils.

Gold Dust does most of the cleaning without your assistance, and does it, too, in a quicker and more thorough manner than will soap or other cleansers.

Gold Dust makes pot and pan spick and span.

Clergyman's Son Had Tuberculosis; Now Well

People who have Consumption are often afflicted with bright hopes of recovery, only to realize that improvement is but temporary. Consumption is decided by every one. Those who had it and used Eckman's Alternative can testify to its beneficial effects. No one need doubt it—there is plenty of evidence from live witnesses. Investigate the following:

Amenia, N. Y.
"Gentlemen: Prior to Feb. 1908, I was located in Rochester, N. Y., suffering with Latipne, which developed into tuberculosis. My physician gave me one month to live. I was having terrible night sweats and mid-day chills and losing flesh rapidly, having gone from 150 to 100 pounds. I could not take any food. I was discouraged. My father, who is a clergyman, heard of Eckman's Alternative and induced me to take it. The night sweats and chills disappeared, my cough became easier and gradually diminished and in a few days I developed an appetite. The diet in months, I am now in perfect health, back to 150 lbs. I feel certain that I owe my life to Eckman's Alternative."

STOLEN SINGER

by MARTHA DELLINGER

"Mr. Van Camp and his friend came in just after I'd put you to bed, Miss Redmond, and ate a bite of breakfast right off that table; and 'twas a mercy I'd cleared all the kitch out of the attic, as I did last week, for Mr. Van Camp he wanted a place to sleep; and he's up there now. Used to be a whole lot of the parson's books up there; but I put them on a shelf in the spare room. The other man went off toward the village."

Agatha, looking about the pleasant kitchen, was tempted to linger. Sallie's conversation yielded to the discerning, something of the richness of the past; and Agatha began to yearn for a better knowledge of the recluses who had been her friend, unknown, through all the years. But she remembered her industrious plans for the day and postponed her talk with Sallie.

"I remember there used to be a grove, a stretch of wood, somewhere beyond the church, Sallie. Which way is it—along the path that goes through the churchyard?"
"No, this way, right back to the yard. Parson Thayer he used to walk that way quite often." Sallie went with Agatha to another stile beyond the churchyard, and pointed over the pasture to a fringe of dark trees along the farther border. "Right there by that apple tree, the path is. But don't go far, Miss Redmond; the woods ain't healthy."

"All right, Sallie; thank you. I'll not stay long." She called Danny and started out through the pasture, with the hound, sober and dignified and happy, at her heels.
The wood was cool and dim, with an uneven wagon road winding in and out between the stumps. Enormous sugar-maples reared their forms here and there; occasionally a little birch lifted a tossing head; and, farther within, pines shot their straight trunks, arrow-like, up to the canopy above.

Farther along, the road widened into a little clearing, beyond which the birch and maple trees gave place entirely to pines and hemlocks. The underbrush disappeared, and a brown carpet of needles and cones spread far under the shade. The leafy rustle of the deciduous trees ceased, and a majestic stillness, deeper than thought, pervaded the place. At the clearing just within this deeper wood Agatha paused, sat down on a stone and took Danny's head in her lap. The dog looked up into her face with the wistful, melancholy gaze of his kind, inarticulate yet eloquent.

The sun was nearly at zenith, and bright flecks of light lay here and there over the brown earth. As Agatha grew accustomed to the shade, it seemed pleasant and not at all cheerful—the gaiety of sunlight subdued only to a softer tone. The resolution which had brought her thither returned. She stood up under the dome of pines and began softly to sing, trying her voice first in single tones, then a scale of two, a trill. At first her voice was not clear, but as she continued it emerged from its sheath of huskiness clear and flute-like, and liquid as the notes of the thrushes that inhabited the wood. The pleasure of the exercise grew, and presently, warbling her songs there in the otherwise pleasant forest, Agatha became conscious of a strange accompaniment. Pausing a moment, she perceived that the grove was vocal with tone long after her voice had ceased. It was not exactly an echo, but a slowly receding resonance, faint duplications and multiplications of her voice, gently floating into the thickness of the forest.

Charmed, like a child who discovers some curious phenomenon of nature, Agatha tried her voice again and again, listening, between whistles, to the ghostly tones reverberating among the pines. She sang the slow majestic "Lascia ch'io pianga," which has tested every singer's voice since Handel wrote it; and then, curious, she tried the effect of the aerial sounding-board with quick, brilliant runs up and down the full range of the voice. But relief and pleasure to Mr. Van Camp to find his cousin, ill as he was; for he had feared the worst."

Agatha had not heard Miss Reynier's name before, but she knew vaguely that Mr. Van Camp had been with a yachting party when he arrived at Charlesport. Now that she was face to face with Miss Reynier, a keen liking and interest, a quick confidence, rose in her heart for her.

"Then perhaps you know Mr. Hambleton," said Agatha impulsively. "The fever turned last night. Were you told that he is better?"
"No, I don't know him," said Melanie, shaking her head. "Nevertheless, I am heartily glad to hear that he is better. Much better, they said at the house."

They had been standing at the place where Agatha had first discovered her visitor, but now they turned back into the clearing.

"Come and try the organ pipes again," she begged. They walked about the wood, singing first one strain and then another, testing the curiously beautiful properties of the pine dome. They were quickly on a footing of friendliness. It was evident that each was capable of laying aside formality, when she wished to do so, and each was, at heart, frank and sincere. Melanie's talent for song was not small, yet she recognized in Agatha a superior gift; while, to Agatha, Melanie Reynier seemed increasingly mature, polished, full of charm. They left the wood and wandered back through the pasture and over the stile, each learning many things in regard to the other. They spoke of the place and its beauty, and Agatha told Melanie of the childhood memories which, for the first time, she had revived in their living background.

"How our thoughts change!" she said at last. "As a child, I never felt this farm to be lonely. It was the most populous and entertaining place in all the world. I much preferred the wood to anything in the city. I love it now, too, but it seems the essence of solitude to me."

"That is because you have been where the passions and restlessness of men have centered. One is never the same after that."

"Strangely enough, the place now belongs to me," went on Agatha. "Parson Thayer, the former owner and resident, was my mother's guardian and friend, and left the place to me for her sake."

"Ah, that is well!" cried Melanie. "It will be your castle of retreat, your Sans-Souci, for all your life. I envy you! It is charming. Pastor Parson, do you say?—Parson Thayer was a man of judgment."

"Yes, and a man of strange and dominating personality, in his way. Everything about the house speaks of him and his tastes. Even Danny here follows me, I really believe, because I am beginning to appreciate his former master."

Agatha stooped and patted the dog's head. Youth and health, helped by the sympathy of a friend, were working wonders in Agatha. She beamed with happiness.
"Come into the house," she begged, Melanie, "and look at some of his books with me. But first we'll find Sallie and get luncheon, and perhaps Mr. Van Camp will appear by that time. Poor man, he was quite worn out. Then you shall see Parson Thayer's books and flowers, if you will."

They strolled over the velvet lawn toward the front of the house, where the door and the long windows stood open. Down by the road, and close to the lilac bushes that flanked the gateway, stood a large silver-white automobile—evidently Miss Reynier's conveyance. The driver of the machine had disappeared.

"I mustn't trespass on your kindness for luncheon today, thank you," Melanie was saying; "but I'll come again soon, if I may." Meantime she was moving slowly down the walk. But Agatha would not have it so. She clung to this woman friend with an unwonted eagerness, begging her to stay.

"We are quite alone, and we have been so miserable over Mr. Hambleton's illness," she pleaded quite illogically. "Do stay and cheer us up!" And so Melanie was persuaded; easily, too, except for her compunctions about abusing the hospitality of a household whose first care must necessarily be for the sick.

"I want to stay," she said frankly. "The house breathes the very air of restfulness itself; and I haven't seen the garden at all!" She walked back over the lawn, looked admiringly out toward the garden, with its purple and yellow flowers, then gazed into the lofty thicket above her head, where the high elm spread its century-old branches. Agatha, standing a little apart and looking at Melanie, was again struck by some haunting familiarity about her face and figure. She wondered where she could have seen Miss Reynier before.

And so Melanie was persuaded; easily, too, except for her compunctions about abusing the hospitality of a household whose first care must necessarily be for the sick.

"I want to stay," she said frankly. "The house breathes the very air of restfulness itself; and I haven't seen the garden at all!" She walked back over the lawn, looked admiringly out toward the garden, with its purple and yellow flowers, then gazed into the lofty thicket above her head, where the high elm spread its century-old branches. Agatha, standing a little apart and looking at Melanie, was again struck by some haunting familiarity about her face and figure. She wondered where she could have seen Miss Reynier before.

MUSTEROLE

No Plaster! No Blister!

Everybody knows how the good old-fashioned mustard plaster relieves a cold, an ache or a pain.

Your mother and your grandmother always applied it. The plaster burned awfully. But it surely brought relief.

MUSTEROLE is the same remedy without the plaster and without the blister.

MUSTEROLE is a clean, white, ointment, made with the oil of mustard.

You don't have to bother with a cloth. You simply rub MUSTEROLE on the spot where the pain is—rub it on briskly—and the pain is gone!

Not a blister is left, even on tender skin! Instead it has a delicious, comforting effect.

matism, Lumbago, Pains and Aches of Back or Joints, Sprains, Sore Muscles, Bruises, Chills, Frosted Feet, Colds of the Chest, (It prevents pneumonia.) Millions of jars of MUSTEROLE are sold annually. It is a staple in the large hospitals. Doctors and nurses use it and recommend it to patients. Ask your doctor.

At your druggist's, in 25c and 50c jars, and a special large hospital size for $2.50.

If your druggist cannot supply you send 25c or 50c to the Musterole Company, Cleveland, O., and we will mail you a jar, postpaid.

Doctors Tell How Musterole Relieves:
Dr. J. P. Frey, Chicago, Ill.—"I prescribe your Musterole every day. Use it in all cases of alveolar abscess and inflammation."

Dr. Abbott T. Hutchinson, New York, N. Y.—"I have prescribed many times your Musterole."

THE DAILY NOVELETTE

HAVE KATE OR HANNA

"I have come to you," explained the tall, sallow man in a broken voice, "because I can stand it no longer."

"Sit it!" said the great detective lightly, and waved the tailor to a chair. It took the great detective but the fraction of a second to deduce that his visitor was a tailor—the knees of his trousers bagged so and his coat fitted so dreadfully about the shoulders.

"I've never been able to keep a box of cigars two weeks," continued the tailor, mending his broken voice as he went along, "without suddenly finding that someone has removed every single cigar. I would have suspected my wife, but I've never been able to notice anything stronger than spearmint and Ceylon tea on her breath."

"How many cigars do you smoke a day?" asked the great detective thoughtfully, after he had leaned back in his chair a moment with the ends of his long fingers pressed closely together in a little way that he had.

"Four," replied the tailor.

"How many in a box?" pursued the great detective.

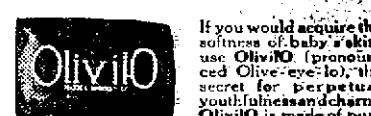

"Fifty," replied the tailor, wonderingly.

"Just about two weeks, eh?" remarked the great detective, pointedly.

With a guilty blush the tailor slunk out the door and slid down the banisters so as not to make any noise.

OLD FASHIONED FAMILY REMEDY FOR COLDS AND BODY BUILDING

Father John's Medicine is a physician's prescription.

Prescribed for the Rev. Father John O'Brien of Lowell, Mass., by an eminent specialist in 1855.

Father John recommended this prescription to his parishioners and friends and in this way it became known as Father John's Medicine.

This story is true and we guarantee to give $25,000.00 to any charitable institution if shown otherwise.

Father John's Medicine will cure coughs, colds and all throat and lung troubles, prevent consumption, and make flesh and strength if taken faithfully. It is not a patent medicine, and does not contain alcohol or poisonous drugs.

If you have any difficulty in securing Father John's Medicine from your druggist, write to Father John's Medicine, Lowell, Mass., enclosing $1.00 for a large bottle by express prepaid.

Property Owners Shake Up Your Agents

Just exactly what is your agent doing to dispose of your salable property?

Just exactly what is he doing to rent your vacant rentable property?

What excuse is he giving you for not selling or renting your properties?

Remember, there is a vast difference between an "excuse" and "reason."

An "excuse" may be merely an apology, but a "reason" is a cause—one which produces an effect.

Just glance over these "real estate" columns and the "to rent" columns each day and see if your property is being advertised there.

If it is not, that is probably the real reason why your salable property remains unsold and your renting property untenanted.

This is well worth looking into, because it affects your pocket-book.

The realty owners and agents who are telling of their properties through the selling and renting columns of The Gazette are talking to thousands of prospective buyers and renters who cannot be reached through any other Janesville newspaper—who read no Janesville newspaper regularly except The Gazette.

If you handle your own property, send your ad to The Gazette, or if you happen to be one of those easy going men who sit about waiting for something to turn up, why don't you shift the burden and place your property in the hands of some of the live, active men whose ads you see here today, tomorrow, Thursday.

For Baby's Coughs and Cold.

Do not give that little baby cough syrup designed for older people. The tender organism requires something specially designed for it.

The very best remedy, we believe, is Baby's Cough Syrup. There is nothing in it that can harm the most delicate infant, although it is most efficient in the treatment of coughs, hoarseness, whooping coughs, and similar diseases of the air passages.

It is so pleasant to take and so pleasant in results that we know, once you use it for baby, you will be grateful to us for having recommended it to you. We promise you that if you do not find it exactly what you have claimed for it, and if it does not relieve baby's cough and cold, the money you paid for it will be refunded immediately upon your telling us.

Price 25 cents. Sold in this community only at our store.
